Instructions

Choose one footage (scene) from the news clip. Analyze how media bias is presented by completing the chart below. Support your answers with evidence from the footage.

Media Framing Element	What did you observe in the chosen footage?	How could this influence the audience?
Language Use	The language in this footage is from a local voice, and it is simple, focusing on the conflict and violence happening in Somalia.	The audience may see Somalia as nothing but a conflict-filled country, ignoring other aspects like the community and daily life there.
Emotional Appeal	The locals are shown to be stressed because of the conflict in the country, holding their children.	This creates a sense of fear, sadness and sympathy among the audience.
Visual Footage	The footage shows women and children, including a baby, in a makeshift camp surrounded by ruins, while they appear worried and distressed.	As said before, the audience will feel sad for the locals and stressed, sympathizing with the people in Somalia.

Credibility of Sources	The report was made by BBC and has an interview from a local citizen affected by the conflict. However, only one perspective is shown in this clip.	The BBC branding and local viewpoint can make the information appear trustworthy, but showing only one perspective can lead the audience to accept that viewpoint without hearing other sides first.
Overall Media Bias	What type of media bias or framing is evident? Support your answer with evidence from the clip. Negative framing is evident as the clip emphasizes conflict and fighting while showing distressed civilians.	It can make the audience create stereotypes about the country and only seeing it as a stressful warzone.

Critical thinking questions

1. How might the audience's opinion change if the report used different words, visuals, or sources?

The audience's opinion could change if the report used more positive and hopeful words, showing the history, culture, communities and positive developments of the people in Somalia rather than focusing heavily on the conflict and danger.

2. Do you think the report is balanced? Explain your answer using evidence from the clip.

I don't think that the report is balanced because it focuses more on the negative aspects of Somalia, such as the destruction, conflict and poverty because of the civil war. For instance, the clip highlights the fighting between different clans and the government's conflict with al-Shabab, while showing citizens living in difficult conditions.
